WANTED!

Keen, capable and competent farmer, committed to sustainable farming, for a share-farming opportunity in West Wales

Angela and David Colledge.

The Venture team is currently seeking a keen, capable and competent farmer who will provide the appropriate match – a business partner with the right combination of skills, knowledge and ambition.

The owners of what is today a 575-acre organic farm on the Pembrokeshire/Carmarthenshire border, which has a herd of over 70 Simmental suckler cattle plus followers, wish to focus on their flourishing holiday letting business. Could you be the individual they are hoping will come forward?

David Colledge, an accountant, and his wife Angela – now the farmer – left north London to move to Gwarmacwydd, near Clynderwen, in 1985. They bought the historic stone-built house with numerous traditional stone outbuildings, starting out with 106 acres of poorly fenced lowland and purchasing 50 Friesian dairy cows.

"We are past the usual retirement age, but still active and with the tourism enterprise increasingly taking up more of our time, we feel there is scope to work collaboratively with an energetic and focused new business partner, to maximise the potential of the farm."

"As a family we each feel ready to take a step back from day-today farming and to achieve that, we need new blood, and a fresh perspective from someone who is as committed as we are to not only organic farming but sustainable, self-sufficient farming."
