Case Study Capital Law

Capital Law is a leading provider of commercial legal services to private and public sector clients throughout the UK, Europe and beyond, employing over 100 people at its main office in the heart of the Cardiff Capital Region.

Combined with its integrated management consultancy, Capital People Consultants, the company offers a complete, dedicated and informed service to its clients.

Chris Nott, Managing Partner of Capital Law describes Cardiff as, "an outstanding place to do business", also commenting that, "the supply of brilliant people is the first and last thing I look for; my only profile is my people and Wales offers me an incredible talent pool".

With 20,000 students in the city studying business-related courses, such as accounting, banking, economics and law, it's no surprise that skilled people are easy to come by.

"New companies don't always have the capital they might need in the early stages, and as a young and ambitious business we were fortunate to have the Welsh Government step in to support us".

The Welsh Government provided training support and also helped the firm connect with other organisations in the area, which has helped to create a close knit business community that includes the global headquarter of Admiral Insurance Group, the UK & Ireland headquarters of Atradius, Deloitte's Global Risk Assessment Centre, Eversheds' second biggest office globally and the UK Shared Service Centres of both Centrica and Tesco.

"The Welsh Government have been terrific to us".

Capital Law have been in operation through Cardiff's outstanding economic growth over the last 10 years, and this is reflected in the company's success. A notable example of this is the landmark Roadchef case in which Capital Law's lawyers won the class action by Roadchef employees against their former Chief Executive.

Capital Law looks forward to continuing to thrive in Wales' capital, as more plans for improved infrastructure and investment are put into place.
